

| off-topic

#off-topic is for things that has nothing to do with YGG or the crypto space , for example if you wanna talk ...

Good day! We are undergraduate students researching for our thesis, which focuses on designing a sustainable M...

Respondent 1

1. My initial experience was exciting because the idea of earning while playing felt promising. I joined because of the potential to make extra income.
2. As earnings dropped, it made playing feel less rewarding and discouraging.
3. Because players focus on ROI, token value, and earnings instead of gameplay.
4. Honestly, it felt more like a hassle than a helpful feature. Setting up wallets, dealing with gas fees, and running into network issues just made everything feel harder than it needed to be.

(edited)

Good day! We are undergraduate students researching for our thesis, which focuses on designing a sustainable M...

Respondent 2

1. The first P2E game I played was axie and I played it because I saw that people are earning from it
2. When the market collapsed I stopped playing completely
3. I think the reason is that these games were built primarily because of earning and not for gameplay
4. blockchain intergration was good to some extent but too much signing was a problem in my part